A. J. C. Hits 'Inadequate' Record In Civil Rights

NEW YORK (JTA)—The record of the 83rd Congress in enacting legislation to end racial inequality was decried today as "woefully inadequate" by Shad Polier, chairman of the National Executive Committee of the American Jewish Congress. While noting that the 83rd Congress "was no worse than its predecessors," Mr. Polier pointed out that the new Administration's failure to put through an "affirmative program" on civil rights, "no matter how minimal," was particularly "disappointing."

In a statement analyzing the record of the 83rd Congress, Mr. Polier noted that little or no headway had been made by either the House or the Senate on all the standard items of the civil rights program. He underlined its failure to act on the bi-partisan Ives-Humphrey FEPC bill and on proposals to liberalize the McCarran-Walter Immigration Act — despite President Eisenhower's campaign promise.

Mayor Tucker Proclaims Tercentenary Day

Young Adults Attack Slum Conditions In City

The Housing Committee of the Young Adult Council of the Jewish Federation of St. Louis has embarked upon a program which might be path blazing for the major cities in the United States. Recently six young men and women were welcomed into a home where they tore down the old wall paper, replaced old plaster, repainted the living room, repaired the windows and left the more than 100-year-old house with a renewed lease on life.

GLORIA SIMON, secretary at the Shaare Emeth Temple, paints the ceiling on the recent renovating job conducted by the Housing Committee.

Chairman of the committee, Ferd Isserman, Jr., is the guiding spirit of the group. Until recently in the insurance field, he is now associated with an advertising agency. He has been active in the Jewish Welfare Fund and the Jr. Chamber of Commerce. Helping him on the project were Stanley Glantz, art consultant to Woolworth Co., and graduate architect; Arthur Simon, graduate of the School of Business Administration at Washington U., who operates a real estate agency and was active on the Jewish Welfare Fund; Gloria Simon, secretary at Shaare Emeth Temple, former chairman of the Volunteer Service Committee of the Young Adult Council; Jean Wasman, free lance artist, graduate of the School of Fine Arts at Washington U.; and Isaac Young, attorney, former president of the Young Adult Council and one of the leaders since its inception.

The home selected at 1541 S. 3rd St. is inhabited by an elderly, ill couple who are unable to do the rudimentary repairs themselves. The project is part of a grand plan which, hopes Isserman, will snowball into awakening neighborhoods to get together and save their homes. The Housing Committee closely cooperates with the Citizens' Council on Housing and Community Planning. The council together with the Health Dept. and other civic groups works in selected areas to alarm tenants and landlords to the dangers of an encroaching slum area. Eugene Mackey, well-known St. Louis architect and council chairman and Charles Copley, Deputy Health Commissioner, expressed their approval of the Jewish Y. A. C.'s pioneering project.

Recently the full 22-men Housing Committee met to plan their own film on housing. An outline of the film script had been prepared and production problems were discussed. Among others there is Stanley Glantz who has been contributing his services to the making of this original film. The film will be taken on their next "face-lifting" job. Once ready, it will be made available to neighborhoods and civic groups through the help of the Citizens' Council. As a result, it is hoped, neighborhoods will invite the Housing Committee into their homes, get together and organize to fight decay. Civic groups might compose new units to engage in this project for raising the housing standards. "While the slums are often beyond repair," said Isserman, "the blighted areas can be conserved—if the residents will organize and see the needs of their neighborhoods."

St. Louis is one of the few cities which has conducted a scientific housing survey some years ago. The results seem to indicate that two-thirds are either slum or blighted areas. The Y. A. C. Housing Committee will work in the blighted section to arrest the spread of the slum area. The St. Louis Minimum Housing Code cannot force residents to fight decay with a brush and a hammer. This individual interest, therefore, has to be enlisted.

Members of the Housing Committee are Al Appelbaum, 5823 Cabanne; Marian Blanke, 3916A Wilmington; Shirley Brownstein, 8128 Stanford; Stanley Glantz, 5941 Washington; Shirley Goldberg, 7115 Tulane; Jake Hoffman, 1043 Francis Pl.; Ferd Isserman, Jr., 1216 Kurt; Dorothy Kornman, 15 Aberdeen Pl.; Esther Millstone, 5780 Westminster; Joan Shapiro and Stanley Shapiro, 400 Alta Dena; (Continued on Page 8)

Mayor Congratulates Jewish Fellow Citizens On The "Beginning of Their 4th Century And Faith In America."

Mayor Raymond Tucker issued a proclamation calling attention to the landing of the first group of Jewish settlers, in what is now New York, 300 years ago.

The full proclamation reads:

"Whereas, 300 years ago on September 7, 1654, 23 Jews seeking a haven from religious persecution settled in New Amsterdam, and became the first Jewish community in continental United States, and

Whereas, in the course of the following 3 centuries, this small band of pioneers have grown into the largest and most prominent community in the world, and

Whereas, in war and in peace in the colonial era and during the revolution, and after the Declaration of Independence, until this day, Jews have been an integral and important part of the American nation and city of St. Louis, and

Whereas, suitable celebration will be held throughout the country marking the Tercentenary year of the first Jewish settlement in the United States, and

Whereas, as part of the observance a number of Jewish rabbis and clergymen will exchange pulpits thus demonstrating once again the spirit of religious tolerance and understanding which is a vital part of our American heritage:

Now, therefore, I, Raymond R. Tucker, Mayor of the city of St. Louis, do hereby proclaim Tuesday, September 7, as American Jewish Tercentenary Day in the city of St. Louis, and take this means of congratulating our Jewish fellow citizens on their beginning of their 4th century and faith in America."

Four Youth Group Presidents To Be Installed

The Council's concern is to provide the youth groups with a program of education, religion, and fun. Other projects for the coming year will include charity and money-raising programs.

Jewish Draftees To Receive "Consideration"

NEW YORK (JTA)—The National Jewish Welfare Board's Commission on Jewish Chaplaincy has received an official communication from Gen. Lewis B. YOU and YOUR CHILD

By Abraham J. Simon, Ph. D.,
Counselor in Child Development and Family Relations

As this is a first column, the writer would like to make some general observations on columns of this type. They are usually classed with the public educational activity which has been called "mental hygiene" education and, more recently, "family life" education. Such activity can have all of the inefficiency of casting seed to the wind and letting them fall where they may. Particularly at lectures in this field, can we observe that those who need it most, do not come; and those who come have been exposed too frequently to the same wisdom that they can often do as good a job as the speaker.

Yet so many people attend such lectures and read such columns. They have a great popular appeal. Part of the attraction to such columns is the reader's sense of identification with the writer where the raising of children is concerned. Everybody has some claim to wisdom and expertness. Knowledge, familiarity, experience and understanding of process are all involved in expertness. And what person has no such claims—if only from the lessons learned and convictions developed out of their own childhood. So universal is this "expertness" that anyone who lacks enough of this conviction of rightness or competence is automatically supposed to feel inferior or guilty about it. Fortunately, many do not feel this way. They can then not only talk, but learn to do something constructive about (1) Joey insisting on drinking milk only from a bottle at age 3, or (2) declining to move his bowels during a half hour on the bowl, but obviously enjoying it as he does so one minute after being tucked neatly and cleanly into bed, or (3) the countless other acts, habits, and emotional reactions of children which cause parents anxiety.

Pediatricians are beset by too many parents who almost hope that something physically wrong might be diagnosed in connection with habit, behavior, and emotional disorders which the doctor will then magically clean up with treatment. So convinced are they of their goodness and competence as parents, that rarely does the doctor risk antagonizing by the suggestion of child guidance.

Perhaps this is another reason people like columns such as this one. If they are available to the general public, and not limited to the "bad, inferior parents" who need help, who knows, we may find a clue to better success with our children without having to face the charge of our own conscience that we are failures!

Let us hope that this column and the correspondence it will develop can accomplish something to change these irrational feelings. Particularly is this important for Jewish people. We are so overwhelmingly devoted to our children, we take so personal any reflection on ourselves—not only their failures, but even achievements somewhat less than outstanding, that our children receive extremes of treatment in what is permitted and what forbidden.

The method we intend to use is correspondence. You are invited to write us of your problems, concerns, questions and beliefs. No person need to identify himself. Each column will develop a central theme growing out of as many letters as possible. Individual replies where requested will be mailed. No personal consultations will be possible. But when a situation requires individual study and attention in our judgment, referral will be made to helpful facilities and resources that are available in the community. General information on community programs for child welfare, health and education will also, from time to time, be themes for our column.

More than 4,000 delegates and guests from every section of the United States attended the 40th annual convention of Hadassah, the Women's Zionist Organization of America, at the Waldorf-Astoria in New York City from August 22-25. Among the St. Louis delegates were Mrs. Eugene Fishgall, chapter president; Mrs. Carl Rappaport, president of the Emma Lazarus Group; Mrs. Morris Snitzer, past regional president; Mrs. Norman Mistachkin, president of the Alice Seligsberg Group; Mrs. Nathan Blackman, education chairman; Mrs. Gerald Gruenfeld, medical center chairman; Mrs. Barbara Weinberg, Business and professional women's group president; Mrs. Simon Ruesek, president of the Raphael Landy Group No. 2; Mrs. Simon Cabinsky, president of the Henrietta Zold Group No. 1; Mrs. Babette K. Lipsitz, former Medical Center chairman; Mrs. Bernard Proser, past president of the Washington, D. C. Chapter; and Mrs. Irwin Wolff.

In the keynote address, the national president of Hadassah urged Jewish women in America to introduce the Hebrew language actively into their homes, join in a pilgrimage to Israel and hold an annual convention there.

Revitalization of the American Zionist movement, said Mrs. Rebecca Shulman, head of the women's Zionist organization, "is dependent on the deep sense of identification developing between us and the people of Israel, the language of Israel and the spirit of Israel."

CARVINGS
FT. WOOD

By CPL. H. BORAZ

The Jewish personnel of Fort Leonard Wood cordially extends a warm and sincere "Shalom" to the Jewish community of St. Louis and to those of you who are individually making our visits to St. Louis very pleasant. We greet the friends and relatives and organizations which have assisted in supplying informative and diversified activities for the Jewish men on this post.

This column will strengthen the relationship between St. Louis and the Jewish boys here, who originate from every state in the Union. We will try to make the Jewish Star a vehicle of communication and understanding for your and our benefit.

In the months to come this column will describe the various activities, feelings and happenings of Fort Wood's Jewish personnel. As military camps are rather standardized, these comments will reflect not only local facts but, to a certain degree, will give you a picture of army life wherever your son might be stationed.

Among the topics which we will cover is the degree of Jewish content in the lives of Jewish soldiers — how far military routine and duties can be reconciled with attendance at religious services and other activities.

We will cover "social life" at Fort Wood, the many activities organized by St. Louis' Jewish groups, the news and events from this military corner of the world and we will share with you our joys and sorrows.

If there is any information you would like to obtain on someone or something out here please write us and we will be most happy to offer our service. Address your correspondence to Cpl. Harold

A Star Is Born

With the trusting hope of the newborn, The Greater St. Louis Jewish Star enters the homes of the Jewish community to present a mosaic of thoughts and activities. The responsibility of publishing a Jewish newspaper, any newspaper, rests mainly on self-control. The temptation to fuse the editorial and news sections overcomes many a victim. Whatever opinions the editorials of the Jewish Star will reflect, they will absolutely be of no relevance in the publication of news or columns. The Jewish Star will be at the service of the total Jewish community and not any one organization or individual.

The quality of the Jewish Star will not exclusively depend on our staff. It will, to a degree, also reflect the cooperation and interest of the community at large. The staff will do their utmost to have the Jewish Star carry a comprehensive message of activities and reports each Monday. But all their efforts will be fruitless unless supported by the community. The past weeks indicate that nearly all local Jewish organizations, agencies and residents are not only willing but very enthusiastic in having a local Jewish paper. Their support and their criticism, which is the reward for our work, will be most welcome.

BOOK REVIEW

WHAT IS THIS JEWISH HERITAGE?

By LUDWIG LEWISOHN

Reviewed by
Rabbi Robert P. Jacobs

(Published by the B'nai B'rith Hillel Foundation, New York 1950; $1.25.)

What is so unusual about this book is that it not only poses the right questions for our generation but also provides the answers within the compass of 48 pages. Who is a Jew? What does one do with his Jewishness? These are the questions. They are posed, explained, sharpened and set up as the purpose of the book. Then in 40 pages of prose which charges upon the reader like phalanxes with banners flying Lewisohn reasons out his answers and sets up the signpost on the road ahead. Show me any other volume in contemporary Jewish literature which does that in such brief form?

WHAT IS THIS JEWISH HERITAGE? is the first of a series of "Little Books" to be published by the B'nai B'rith Hillel Foundations at American universities. They "will deal with issues of fundamental importance to Jewish college students. Since they seek to stimulate discussion and study, they will make demands upon sense, they will not be 'popular' volumes. Written by men of many, variant points of view, they are not intended as final answers but as a challenge to further reading." This volume is an admirable example of hitting the mark.

With amazing simplicity and direct logic, Lewisohn answers the question, Who is a Jew? with the following definitive utterance: If today you are known as a Jew and know yourself to be one, you are what you are not only within the order of nature and biological descent, but within the order of moral freedom, of willing and of choice, of loyalty to a historic reality and to a set of inherent values of transcendent worth."

He goes on to answer the decisive question: What to do about one's Jewishness with an inspiring appeal to be oneself, that is to be fully a Jew. The tragic fact that freedom and differentiation are diminishing in the world, and the inspiring challenge to every Jew is to help freedom along by maintaining his own and his people's individuality. This goes against the grain of the American environment with its appeal to the "crowd culture," to conformity, to mediocrity and to oblivion. The Jew, therefore, has a need to know who he is, and his knowledge or ignorance of his tradition makes the difference between helping to save democracy or giving it a push toward totalitarianism.

In two brief chapters on "The Jewish Heritage," Lewisohn describes its form and content, stressing the characteristics of endurance, of reoccurrence and of "ever-presentness." He stresses the uniqueness of the Jewish character, history and function. And he has a target—the individual Jew, his reader. "The whole purpose of a liberal education is to make the student the partaker of that substance, (history and culture). He whose mind has no past is an empty creature... he must start feebly and blankly on an empty barbarism."

In a climactic utterance Lewisohn shouts: "A Jew, a young Jew, who desires to re-commit himself to his true destiny, cannot separate himself from the fellowship of Israel in the concrete here and now. The nearest synagogue—this is the place to begin. 'Perhaps you, humble and alone, are destined in your maturity to bring back a living spark of what is now so often only a memory or an aspiration.'"

Many a Jew has found in Lewisohn's creative works of the past—essays, auto-biography and novels—a window into his own soul, a clear wording of his own quest in the world; and has found his way back to the reaching arms of his own people. This little volume, starkly written, chucking out nuggets of reformulations of Lewisohn's years, may be in quintessence his most mature statement of his philosophy of life and Judaism. For some readers this book may be a new experience in finding himself, a new beginning of self-understanding as an American and as a Jew.

Family Service Agency Inaugurates Home-Maker Service

A home-maker service has recently been inaugurated by the Jewish Family Service Agency. This service is a carefully planned arrangement between the family and the agency to keep a family together or an aged person comfortably, stressed Mrs. Frieda Romalis, director of the Agency.

The Agency emphasized that the new service is not a maid or nursery service, but the use of an experienced, trained person, investigated and approved by the agency to help in situations when needed. The home-makers are both white and Negro.

The family will be expected to pay a service charge and the wages of the home-maker whenever possible; however, when necessary, the service will be free of charge. Further information is available at the Jewish Family Service Agency, OLIVE 2-6850.

BEHIND THE SCENES AT THE UNITED NATIONS

By David Horowitz, UN Correspondent of the Jewish Star

schedule here included a luncheon in the famous Delegates' dining room, a tour of the buildings and a briefing on Israel-UN relations by the young Israeli bachelor delegate Arthur Liveran. Introduced by Hadassah's UN observer Joselyn Shore, Mr. Liveran told the enthusiastic gathering assembled in the Economic and Social Council chamber that "Palestine is a test case for and a challenge to the UN. Israel has asked for nothing from anyone," he said. "The only commodity she is asking for is peace."

In touring the UN the Hadassah representatives had the rare opportunity of being guided by an Israeli, Mrs. Clara Allon, who is one of about 100 guides taking the public around on daily tours. The guides themselves, all young and charming ladies, represent 20 nationalities and work under the American Association of the United Nations. Since the UN has become the number one sightseeing spot in New York, taking precedence even over the Statue of Liberty, the tours have developed into a thriving "business." The hour-tours, organized into groups of 20 and costing one dollar per adult, continue all day long seven days a week. Recently the number of visitors reached the million mark.

Guided Tour

Readers planning to visit the UN might be interested in knowing just exactly what they may expect to see during the tour. Your correspondent, having joined one of the tours under the guidance of Clara Allon, can give you this picture:

First, upon entering the UN Public Lobby at 45th Street and First Avenue and registering for a tour, you are given a small UN button to wear and a pamphlet outlining the world organization. Within a few minutes you are assigned to a group of 20 and a guide. Next you are shown a unique model of the 16-acre compound making up this international city. The guide explains the various buildings giving you a bird's-eye view. You are then taken into the Lobby of the Conference Building where you are shown, through the west window, the Israeli gardens, a sort of patio built with Israeli stones, Israel's gift to the UN. After this the guide escorts you into the main floor of the 39-story Secretariat building where, following an explanation of this tall structure, you go up an escalator to the third floor and enter a lobby into the Conference Building. Here you are taken into each of the three conference chambers, the Security, the Trusteeship and the Economic Councils. The guide spends about ten minutes in each fully explaining the architecture and the functions of each in a concise and vivid manner. When you leave these chambers you will have a full knowledge of the magnificent world-wide activities of these three vital organs of the UN. On this same floor you will also be shown a huge mural painted by a Spanish artist under a Guggenheim Foundation grant. It depicts mankind's struggle for peace and security.

Next the guide takes you back to the main General Assembly building, which is approximately the size of the Radio City Music Hall. Seated in the balcony of this huge Temple of Peace, you will be given a comprehensive lecture on the various functions of the plenary sessions which convene once a year, usually in September, as a sort of "world parliament" composing the 60 member nations. You are then escorted to the Public Lobby again where you are shown the little prayer-room and with this the official tour ends. You are now welcome to stay as long as you wish in a special section reserved for the public one floor below the main lobby. Here you will find a gift shop, a book store, a post office selling UN stamps and comfortable chairs for rest and relaxation. You may also apply for free tickets to meetings and hear delegates debate the vital issues of the day.

All in all, a guided tour is most educational. You will leave this world center inspired and with a better understanding of what the UN is really doing. When you do visit, try to get into a tour under the guidance of the lovely Israeli Clara Allon. Those of you who wish to contact the AJP Bureau here, located in the press area, can do so by asking the receptionist to dial extension 2292.

Hank Morris, Star Sports Editor, To Write Weekly Column

Henry "Hank" Morris will be in charge of the Star's sports department and write the weekly column "Sports." Morris has been active in many sport activities and is well acquainted with sports in the Jewish community and at large.

Sport clubs and organizations active in sports are requested to contact Hank Morris for coverage. "With the cooperation of the local groups we plan to publish the current standings of competitions and reports, as well as, evaluate individual or team performances," stated Morris. The Star's sports editor will make it his personal business to attend local activities. Groups are urged to submit their schedules of plays well ahead of time to assure coverage.

ST. LOUIS RABBIS ISSUE TERCENTENARY PROCLAMATION

On the tercentenary of the first settlement of twenty-three Jews in America, Jacob R. Mazur, President, Rabbinical Association of St. Louis, M. H. Eichenstein, Chief Rabbi Orthodox Jewish Community of St. Louis, and Samuel Thurman, Dean of St. Louis Rabbis, issued a proclamation which declared tomorrow, September 7, 1954, a sacred day.

Three hundred years ago twenty-three Jews sought a haven from religious persecution and settled in New Amsterdam, which became the first Jewish community in continental United States. To commemorate this day the St. Louis rabbinate recommends that on the evening of September 7 all Jews convene in their synagogues and temples for special services of thanksgiving. All special services will be held at 8 p. m.

"We urge," reads the proclamation, "that rabbis and congregational leaders arrange for appropriate prayers, ceremonies and sermons, so that we may observe this significant day in the history of our faith by the special worship of God whose goodness endureth forever."

Dr. Rosenkranz Speaks At YAC Institute

Dr. Samuel Rosenkranz was the keynote speaker at the first local observance of the American Jewish Tercentenary, which took place last Sunday at Camp Petmita, Kirkwood, in an all-day Institute sponsored by the Young Adult Council of the Jewish Federation. Dr. Rosenkranz noted the contributions which Jews have made to American life and democracy.

Noting the specific achievements in the sciences, arts and other areas, Dr. Rosenkranz pointed to the integration of American and Jewish life and their healthful fusion. He also traced ideas from the Bible which have been included in the Declaration of Independence.

Workshops led by Estelle Askarnazi, literary critic; Dr. Irving Sobol, professor of economics, and Dr. Herbert Mazur, pediatrician and education, discussed the choices of professional fields by Jewish young adults and their contributions to them.

Three displays on American Jewish life by the Women's Division of the Jewish Federation under the chairmanship of Mrs. William Shanski covered the lives of Rabbi Spitzer, dancing instructor Jacob Mahler, and by the American Jewish Historical Society and the Council Against Intolerance.

CAPITOL SPOTLIGHT

By MILTON FRIEDMAN
Jewish Star Correspondent

WASHINGTON—Gefillte fish, a popular Jewish delicacy of Eastern European origin, has been investigated by a Congressional committee anxious to prevent un-American fish from infiltrating into delicatessens and restaurants.

Shortly before adjournment, Congress realized that it had a grave responsibility to protect the nation from foreign-born fish. Sen. Henry C. Dworshak, Idaho Republican, introduced a bill to require all eating places to state the ethnic origin of any trout that might be served. He charged that alien trout are being sold in the guise of American-born Rocky Mountain rainbow trout. To protect America from this peril, the Dworshak bill applied the principles of the McCarran-Walter Immigration Act to all trout from abroad.

After passage by the Senate the bill went to the House Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce. The Committee discussed it carefully for two days. Then Rep. Emanuel Celler, Brooklyn Democrat, had a troublesome thought. "Say the restaurateur puts Danish fish in the soup," he said. "Would he have to say conspicuously to the customers, 'This fish chowder contains alien, un-American trout?' And what about gefillte fish?"

"Gefillte fish," said Rep. Celler, "is a round ball of fish containing many kinds of fish. Suppose a restaurateur making gefillte fish includes some Canadian trout. Must he put a label on that fish ball: 'This ball contains a quantity of Canadian trout?'"

Rep. Joseph P. O'Hara, Minnesota Republican, was in charge of getting the fish bill adopted. Rep. O'Hara said he had once ordered gefillte fish and would let Rep. Celler write the rules on that subject. At this point Rep. Celler admitted that he didn't know for sure what went into gefillte fish. He said he didn't much like it, himself.

A fear was expressed by Rep. Celler, however, that gefillte fish sometimes contained trout of foreign origin. He said that if each fish ball wasn't properly marked, the Dworshak bill would send the restaurant owner to prison for a year. If the offending party tried to slip foreign components into the gefillte fish a second time, he would go behind bars for three years. The argument went on for hours.

Someone sent to the Library of Congress for a cookbook containing a recipe for gefillte fish. Meanwhile, Congressmen decided that the restaurant could just put a sign on the wall saying: "We serve un-American trout." This idea was adopted. Objections arose later from Sen. Pat McCarran, Nevada Democrat, who wanted to make certain changes. After all, Sen. Mc-

Carran is the specialist on immigration and nationality. It was rumored that he wanted to add a proviso to admit Spanish trout for the Basque shepherders in Nevada while barring trout of "undesirable" origin.

Another rumor was that Sen. Joseph R. McCarthy, Wisconsin Republican, would probe both foreign and domestic trout for evidence of subversive leanings. Liberals were prepared for this eventuality and made known they would insist on protection of schools of fish to preserve academic freedom. But Sen. McCarthy was too busy in other troubled waters.

Meanwhile, officials of the Embassy of Israel pondered the gefillte fish question on an unofficial level. Since protocol demands that Congress deal with embassies through the State Department, the matter would have been pursued through diplomatic channels. Embassy attaches were themselves a little dubious about what goes into gefillte fish. Some said the naval attache should be held responsible. Others felt that Addy Cohen, assistant economic officer, who deals with food-stuffs, was the man.

Representatives Celler and O'Hara were both aware that if any agency in Washington knew about gefillte fish it was the Israel Embassy. But the Congressmen considered the issue as one that could be solved domestically without having to call for aid from a foreign, albeit friendly, power.

THE JEW AND HIS COMMUNITY

By RABBI CHARLES HARTMAN, Tpheris Israel Congregation

All Jewish leaders in the United States agree that the non-Jewish character of the environment in which we live, constitutes the most fundamental and inescapable challenge to traditional Judaism. The process of adjustment of the minority to the culture of the non-Jewish majority has been, in the eyes of many, a task of herculean proportions. Undoubtedly, the rapid disintegration of Jewish religious observance in our times is a direct or indirect outgrowth of the manner and position the American Jew has taken in solving this problem.

It is axiomatic that one cannot maintain a position of constant vigilance, ready sacrifice and lofty idealism, for too long a time. Feats of heroism are spontaneous and only extraordinary circumstances are conducive for its manifestation. To be a fighter, a soldier in the army of God 24 hours a day, every day of one's lifetime, can obviously only be the lot of a few.

The problem of environmental adjustment to the dominant culture outside the periphery of Judaism is one which concerns the American Jew only as an individual. Only he is in daily contact with non-Jewish influences at school, business and the professions, at home and in his neighborhood.

When, however, we discuss the manner in which Jewish national and local groups and organizations are discharging their responsibilities to the American Jewish community, we deal with an entirely different situation.

The Jew, when functioning collectively as part of an organized group, deals mainly with specific Jewish needs. Most organizations are in existence primarily to protect and foster the minority status of the Jew, so that he may be in a position to transmit his religious and ethical traditions for the betterment of himself and all mankind. Jewish groups are responsible for the solving of problems raised in our own Jewish world which are of concern to all of us, because we are Jews.

It is within the framework of the Jewish organization that the Jew as an individual seeks the strength, guidance and inspiration to carry on living as a Jew. In the final analysis, it is only the Jewish group which can create the distinctively Jewish environment that the American Jew finds lacking in his day-by-day existence. It is, therefore, of vital importance for the Jewish group to maintain a strong spiritual identification with Judaism, Biblical traditions, Jewish learning. No matter how outstanding and beneficial the service of the group may be, if it lacks a distinctive Jewish personality in its makeup, then it fails in creating a living Jewish community and eventually would completely go out of existence.

In many American communities, the Sabbath as a day of rest is clearly manifest in all Jewish organized activities. The offices are closed and the staffs are not required to work on Saturday. Campaign activities are conducted in a manner that does not conflict with the Spirits of the Sabbath. At fund raising dinners, only

NEW DIRECTOR

The B'nai B'rith Youth Organization announced the appointment of Donald Feiner as Missouri-Kansas regional director. Feiner, who recently received his Masters degree in social group work from the University of Denver, will assume his position on September 15. He succeeds Miss Anita Rosenberg.

Kosher food is served, regardless of the degree of religious observance of the participants. Reform Rabbis who do not advocate a strict adherence to the Jewish dietary code, have joined their Orthodox and Conservative colleagues in the East in their demand for Kosher Kitchens in the Long Island Jewish hospital under construction.

It is hoped that with the coming of the New Year, mutual understanding will be reached between the local Rabbinic and lay leaders, so that St. Louis will join the ever growing ranks of other communities who are fully cognizant of the new role Jewish groups must begin to assume.

"... May I congratulate you on your new publication which I am certain will make a contribution to your Jewish community as well as to Anglo-Jewish journalism..."

Marc H. Tanenbaum
(on behalf of Synagogue Council of America).

Dear Editor:

The Mizrahi Women's Organization of America takes great pleasure in extending warm congratulations and best wishes for success to The Greater St. Louis Jewish Star as that newspaper begins publication.

The Anglo Jewish Press throughout the country is performing an invaluable service in the interpretation of Mizrahi Women's work in Israel to the American Jewish community, and we are confident that the Star will add lustre to this already laudable record.

I know that our St. Louis Chapter joins our National Organization in wishing you good luck, and in the hope that you may go from strength to strength.

The Housing Committee operates under the Young Adult Council. The YAC's main function is to educate leadership and provide community service. It is sponsored by the Jewish Federation of St. Louis.

"I feel that St. Louis is ahead of the rest of the nation in an unusual combination of public spirited citizens and administration," stressed Isserman, Jr., "the Jewish Young Adult Council will do its share to save housing, but it needs community backing." A paint brush, a pair of blue jeans, and a lunch basket are the tools which might mark the beginning of a creative undertaking in the city.

Agency Service Program

Federation Facts

(A report to the Jewish Community of St. Louis on some of the activities of the Jewish Federation.)

The Jewish Federation of St. Louis had come to recognize that the complex nature and the growing number of modern community services require many additional persons, equipped with the proper interest, intelligence and information, to give leadership in the many spheres of community life. They recognized too that many of the present leaders in the community had long earned respite from the demands and responsibilities they had been carrying for years. A pipeline of "new blood" was needed to pump fresh life and manpower into the system of community agencies and services.

In 1948, the Federation established the Young Adult Council, as a major division of its operations, for men and women aged 18-30, in the Jewish community of St. Louis, with the interest and potential ability for community service and leadership.

Among the various activities and projects of the Young Adult Council in recent years, none has shown greater promise than the Agency Services Program. This program took shape in the spring of 1952. At that time, a meeting took place among 32 young adults who had shown some special readiness and interest for community work.

A plan which had been formulated previously by the staff and discussed with a number of key young adults, was presented, fully discussed, and finally accepted.

The plan called for a double-barreled approach. A committee of young adults—to be called the Agency Services Committee—were to conduct periodically a series of informal meetings in the homes of members on the work of the health, welfare and recreational agencies in the community. Agency directors and Board presidents were to be invited to these meetings.

Simultaneously a program of "field work" would be instituted. It would add the "learn by doing" ingredient. The young adults believed that the orientation sessions would come to life if they could relate the material presented to them to actual experiences they were having.

Selected young adults were to be chosen and "placed" with certain agencies for committee work, for special projects, or for observing the deliberations of the Board of Directors.

Shortly thereafter the executives of Federation agencies were called together by the Federation Director for discussion on the program. The executives gave wholehearted approval and pledged their support.

The Agency Services Committee of the Young Adult Council has been operating now for 2 years. It has become the top status program in the Council. Agency people, lay and professional, have been impressed, almost without exception, by the high level of interest and maturity of the young adult participants.

In addition to the Federation, other agencies participating in the program have been: Jewish Family Service Agency, Hillel Foundation, B'nai B'rith, Jewish Community Relations Council, Jewish Hospital, American Jewish Committee, Jewish Employment & Vocational Services Agency, Jewish Child Welfare Association, Jewish Orthodox Old Folks' Home, Jewish Community Centers Association, Board of Jewish Education, Social Planning Council of St. Louis.

Sports

by HANK MORRIS

A number of times Jewish and other papers in this country have asserted that the "Jewish Champion" in nearly every sport activity is gradually fading away. The integration and growing acceptance of the Jew in the general community eliminates the need to excel in a particular field to garner enough laurels to satisfy his ambition. This might or might not be so; however, the acute interest in sports on the local scene among Jewish groups raise serious doubts in my mind.

Hank Morris

This column's content will not be rigid. It will not only attempt to cover the activities of individuals and groups on the St. Louis scene, but may discuss various topics if your response indicates such a preference.

Events and competitions in softball, basketball, swimming, handball, ping pong, bowling, etc. whether held at the Y.M.H.A. among the B'nai Brith groups, the Jewish War Veterans or others, will be dealt with in this column. St. Louis high schools, even Washington University or the Cardinals might be featured.

Although predominantly local, national or international events will not be ignored. Personal interviews with national figures, their ideas and lives will be presented to you.

This columnist will be glad to accept your invitations to cover your sport events, whether small or big, if you let us have your schedules in time. The team standings while competitions are in progress will also be covered by the Star.

With your help we make the Star and this column the point of focus for every eager sportman's (or woman's) eye.

SPORTS AT LARGE

BY BILL WOLF

Jewish Star Correspondent

A new reason for Max Schmeling's recent trip to the United States has been advanced by a New York columnist.

Schmeling, the German boxer who was a favorite of Hitler, came here on a projected referee tour, then returned to Germany after many protests.

But Leonard Lyons wrote the following in his August 23 column in the New York Post:

"The real reason for Max Schmeling's recent trip here was not to referee some bouts. That was only the excuse for the granting of a visa. During his visit he picked up the money he deposited, under an assumed name, in three banks in New Jersey . . . Schmeling, however, did have the decency to visit the grave of Joe Jacobs, the manager who made him champ . . ."

A revised edition of the book, "The Jew in American Sports," has come off the press. The book, written by Harold U. Ribalow, brings the sports survey up to date. It is published by the Bloch company. (The new edition will be reviewed in this column shortly) . . .

Writer Bud Schulberg is contributing to the new publication, "Sports Illustrated," which is put out by Time, Life Inc. The magazine is a lavish weekly affair packed with plenty of advertising, and apparently well-heeled financially . . .

As we get closer to the end of the baseball season, it looks more and more like Al Rosen will get a chance to star in the World Series.

Cincinnati tennis fans are talking about the 17-year-old girl who shows promise for the future. She is Marilyn Karabell, who won the city's public parks title. This was her first season of play . . .

Larry Eaans, the chess star, recently was victor of a match in New Orleans. Larry won the U. S. tournament with a 9½ to 2½ score . . .

This columnist recently received a communication from a man who wanted to know whether it was true that Al Rosen had been converted to Catholicism. Of course, the important thing about Al Rosen is his record in baseball, not his religious beliefs. Nevertheless, an answer was sent to the gentleman to set the record straight.

To the contrary, Al Rosen has always made a point of his being Jewish. However, a rumor was started by a newspaper columnist that Rosen made a cross with his bat every time he stepped up to the plate. Al was quick to answer with a telegram pointing out that the motion he made with his bat had no significance but was merely a hitting habit.

Fans are familiar with the various motions peculiar to different players in the majors. In this case, a columnist seized upon something like that to start a rumor flying. It seems that some guys just run out of legitimate material about which to write.

Sandy Willick To Head BBO Youth Olympics

Sandy Willick has been appointed by the local Youth Council of the B'nai B'rith Youth Organization to be chairman of the coming St. Louis B'nai B'rith Youth Olympics. Mr. Willick, a student at Soldan Blewett High Schools, is a member of St. Louis No. 28, one of the oldest B'nai B'rith Youth groups in St. Louis.

The annual Jewish Olympics, or Maccabeh, is sponsored by the Aleph Zadik Aleph high school boys division of the B'nai B'rith Youth Organization. The Olympics this year will last several weeks and will center around a track meet at Harris Teachers College stadium, a swimming meet at the YMHA, bowling and ping pong tournaments, and a final awards outing at Heman Park on October 10.

The B'nai B'rith Youth Organization, the world's largest service organization for Jewish youth, sponsors programs of cultural, community service, religious, athletic, and social interest for young adults and teen agers. The chairman of the local B'nai B'rith Youth Committee is Mrs. Melvin Block of 7301 Delmar, University City. Mr. Stanley Harris is district director. Working with Sandy Willick and his committee of youth will be Neil Goldman of 5851 Plymouth and Ray Schoenfeld of 800 Leland, members of the local adult board. Local BBO headquarters are at 946 Goodfellow.

Several hundred young people will participate in these annual events. The public is invited to all athletic events in conjunction with the Olympics.

Eileen Ann Tzinberg Married To P. D. Hoffman In Noon Ceremony

The wedding of Miss Eileen Ann Tzinberg and Philip Donald Hoffman took place in the Tiara Room of the Park Plaza with Rabbi Ephraim Epstein performing the ceremony punctuated with pink and white flowers. The bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. David L. Tzinberg, 5752 Lindenwood ave., gave a breakfast afterward at the hotel.

The waltz-length bridal gown was of white chantilly lace over satin with hoops and crinoline holding the circular skirt with its rows of ruffled tulle at the hemline. A chapel veil of French illusion was attached to a half hat of lace and pearls, and two white orchids topped the bride's Bible.

Mrs. Robert L. Hoffman served as matron of honor with Miss Elaine Ruban, cousin of the bride, as maid of honor. The bridegroom's cousin, Mrs. Irvin Maizlish, was bridesmaid.

Their gowns were of ice blue crystaletta fashioned on princess lines and their headpieces were garlands of flowers harmonizing with bouquets of white, pink and blue flowers. Judy Rich was flower girl for her cousin.

Hoffman, son of Mr. and Mrs. Max S. Hoffman, Kansas City, Mo., had his brother, Robert L. Hoffman, as best man with Willard Small of Kansas City and Burton Tzinberg, cousin of the bride, serving as groomsmen. The guests were ushered to their seats by Seymour Palans and Jack Palans, fraternity brothers of the bridegroom in Sigma Alpha Mu at the University of Missouri.

Hoffman and his bride left for the Wisconsin Dells on their wedding trip. After Sept. 5 they will be at home at 503 Stewart rd., Columbia, Mo., while they both complete their last year of study at the University of Missouri.

CRAFTY CLIPPINGS

by Libby

Hi Kids, This is Libby welcoming all children to the first issue of the Greater St. Louis Jewish Star and hoping that you and your parents will enjoy our paper and Crafty Clippings.

I am sure that you are wondering what such a column as Crafty Clippings will be about. So as to not keep you in suspense — this column will appear each week in the Greater St. Louis Jewish Star and show you how to make things. Probably better known to you as that stuff called "arts and crafts" by your teachers or counselors.

Of course, we hope you will enjoy making such items as toys and games to play with, and gifts for Mom or Dad, but many of the things we will do will be just for the fun of doing them. Because we know that each one of you doesn't have a complete craft shop of your own, we will try to use only inexpensive materials, that you can find around home or buy for a few cents.

We won't have any crafts in this week's paper, but just by the way—did you ever put a few drops of red, blue, or green food coloring in a tray of water before freezing it into ice cubes? Ask Mom to help you do this and surprise the family by how beautiful the colored ice looks in a glass of water or lemonade.

Just two things to remind you. First — "Crafty Clippings" are for you to clip out with your scissors and save—and one day we will make notebooks to keep them in. So cut them out and put them in a box and be sure to save a complete set. The second thing I want to tell you is that I would like very much to hear from you—about what you would like us to make, or about any craft problem of your own with which you would like help.

Also you might let me know what things you like that we make—and even those you don't like and why. Just write to Libby care of the Jewish Star at 6370 Delmar and be sure to include your name and address. Some letters we will be able to answer in the newspaper—so let me hear from you!

Bye for now, I'll be looking for you next week!

LIBBY.

OUR FILM FOLK

By Leon Gutterman
Jewish Star Correspondent

HOLLYWOOD—Chances of the anti-Semitic German film, "Jew Sues," being shown anywhere new are practically nil since the only remaining copy of the picture is being held by U. S. authorities in Washington.

The second existing negative of the picture was burned last week in Zurich, Switzerland, by its producer, Veit Harlan. He declared he was "deeply ashamed" that his name was connected with the infamous propaganda film and that he had destroyed his only negative even though he had good offers for prints.

According to Harlan, he produced "Jew Sues," at the order of Nazi propaganda chief Joseph Goebbels in 1941 and his present act was designated to demonstrate his dislike for anti-Semitism. The late Emil Jannings, an avowed Nazi, acted the part of Sues.

George Jessel plans to continue his one man campaign against the radio-TV rating services. He says that in his recent ambassadorial junkets for ABC network he visited some 70 cities around the country and has yet to find a single person who has been called or checked by a rating service. He says he has plugged the query on all of the radio-TV appearances he has made in each city without a nibble.

Says George: "If one Englishman has tea at four, you multiply it by 20,000,000 Englishmen and they're all having tea at four. If two Frenchmen say this is what we're going to do tonight, you may multiply it by 50,000,000 Frenchmen and not be wrong. But America is too individualistic . . . because one American eats prunes at 8 o'clock some Tuesday or Sunday night, you can never convince me that every American, or a great majority of them, are doing the same thing at a certain given hour. And so, because somebody phones 12 people and says 'that's the rating' doesn't convince me, or even them, because it just doesn't make any sense."

Singer Eddie Fisher, who exited the Army a year ago March, has become one of the top money earners in show business during the last year via his multiple activities in recording, television and night club performer. Since donning civillian clothes it's estimated that he's grossed more than $700,000.

In the last year, Fisher has sold 5,000,000 Victor recordings, including two 1,000,000 sellers. His take from this end is about $200,000. In addition, the Eddie Cantor discovery has his own NBC show, besides making numerous guest shots on other TV stanzas for another $250,000. Fisher also has been doing club and theatre engagements, sometimes getting $7500 for a week-end date only. His estimated income from this field is another $250,000.

With Columbia Pictures releasing "The Jolson Story" once again, Decca records is readying another push on its flock of Jolson albums. Decca has nine Jolson sets in its catalog and one of the albums, based on the score of the Columbia film topped the 1,000,000 marker while the picture was first shown seven years ago.

The wife of a movie star was telling Hedy Lamarr that she bought all her Christmas presents in October. "But how do you know in October," exclaimed Hedy, "who your friends are going to be in December?"

Friday To Mark Ninth Year For Beth Hayeled

Registration is now open for the Beth Hayeled Nursery School located at 400 DeMun in Clayton. This Friday will mark the start of the ninth year of this pre-school kindergarten under the auspices of the Board of Jewish Education, a community-sponsored organization.

"The Nursery School with its well equipped classrooms and playground features a progressive program of activities presented in a wholesome Jewish atmosphere," stated Dr. Fish, Director of the Board of Jewish Education. Primary emphasis is placed on personality and social development.

Children between the ages of 3½ and 5 are eligible to enroll. Transportation is provided upon request. Dr. Fish stated further that because tuition rates are reasonable and enrollment is necessarily limited, early registration is advised. Anyone interested is invited to visit the school at 400 DeMun or call PA. 5-8318 for further information or registration.
